

Short biography Eberhardt Weber

“Being an entrepreneur is deeply rooted in my family and my DNA. I grew up in a family food retail business and started my first company at 16 to develop bespoke software solutions. In 2010, I founded the longest-running online supermarket in Germany, and finally, in 2015, I founded Emporix, the leading software provider for modern B2B commerce. My motivation to work for companies like Hewlett-Packard (HP), Intershop or Daimler was either to learn from successful larger companies or because I simply needed the money.”

Eberhardt Weber is co-founder and CEO of Emporix, a cloud-native digital commerce platform provider for both B2B and B2C. He has been involved with digital commerce technology since 1997 and previously worked in management at eCommerce technology providers Hybris (now owned by SAP), Intershop, and Hewlett-Packard. In 2010, he founded Lieferladen.de, the first online supermarket in Germany.

Emporix provides the leading cloud-native digital commerce platform for B2B and sophisticated B2C in one solution.
